I am trying to use a Kyocera Scitec sc35 CNC laser cutter. .Tissue-specific expression of P2X3 receptor and ATP synthesis in the rat. Tissue expression of P2X3 receptor mRNA and ATP synthesis as related to the P2X3 receptor function was studied in the rat. Reverse transcription-polymerase chain reaction (RT-PCR) and reverse transcription-coupled polymerase chain reaction (RT-cPCR) analyses showed that P2X3 receptor mRNA is expressed in the rat brain, heart, lung, spinal cord, kidney, pancreas, intestine, stomach, thymus, and placenta. High levels of P2X3 receptor mRNA were detected in the cortical and hippocampal regions of the rat brain. RT-cPCR demonstrated the presence of the P2X3 receptor in the brain, heart, and lung. Expression of the P2X3 receptor was measured by ligand binding with [3H]-alpha,beta-methylene ATP as a radioligand. Radioligand binding assays showed that [3H]-alpha,beta-methylene ATP binding was present in the rat brain, heart, lung, kidney, and pancreas. The increase in the level of P2X3 receptor mRNA in the brain, heart, and lung after exposure of the rats to hypoxia-ischemia was studied by RT-cPCR analysis. The results showed that P2X3 receptor mRNA expression is up-regulated in the rat brain, heart, and lung. In conclusion, the present results demonstrate the expression of the P2X3 receptor and ATP synthesis in rat tissues including the brain, heart, and lung. These data strongly suggest the involvement of P2X3 receptor in the regulation of neuronal function and endocrine activity. Novel indirect evidence for P1 receptor involvement in sialadenitis. Benzoyl-pyrrolidyl-peptides (BPP) mimic the activities of lysosomal enzymes in the gastrointestinal mucosa and are inhibitors of peptic-hydrolytic enzymes. Their effect on inflammatory diseases has not been studied. Intra-gastric infusion of BPP, which is devoid of activity on rabbit stomach mucosa, induces edema in rat gastric mucosa, and mice treated
