Q: mysql timestamp comparison I am doing an application that compare database data with the timestamps and returns the user an alert if the form has been last modified and is older than an X times. That is all that has to be done, I think. I'm having difficulty with the proper syntax for when I filter a link table to make sure the timestamp is in that time frame. So I have something like: SELECT p.*, c.last_modified FROM page_content as p LEFT JOIN page_content_categories as catc ON catc.page_id = p.id LEFT JOIN page_contents as c ON c.content_id = catc.content_id Is this the right syntax? Should it be WHERE c.last_modified

Although she said she has been reassured by modeling simulations, she nonetheless admitted that the estimates by Harvard and Imperial College scientists are probably low-balling the number of Americans who will die of the disease. In a press conference Wednesday, Trump said he knew nothing about the Russia investigation during the 2016 campaign. But when former Deputy FBI Director Andrew McCabe testified before the House Intelligence Committee that the president was probably lying in that testimony, Trump demanded "proof." "What proof?" he asked. "What more proof do you need?" There's a reasonable chance that Russia did attempt to interfere with the 2016 election, but there's no reason to assume the same was true of the Mueller probe, or that it involved the president himself. Trump's assertion of the latter possibility is either an attempt to interfere with the investigation into himself or — in light of the record evidence — simply ludicrous. Why are congressional Republicans so eager to get a robust defense bill passed? Apparently, they just want more "toys" for their defense industry friends. And by "toys", they mean weapons, like the TOW missiles the Navy wants. House Republicans voted overwhelmingly to fund Trump's wall on

* ^*cut*^ female flies (Fig 3C{ref-type="fig"}). It is possible that the lower level of *Nefarium* ^*cut*^ female flies than male flies after genotype 2 was the result of male competitive ability or male ovarian development when ovipositing (S1 Fig{ref-type="supplementary-material"}). To test whether *N*. *ceranae* influences the nutritional content in the syrups, we further examined the levels of six selected essential elements in both Nef-depleted and control syrups (S8 Table{ref-type="supplementary-material"}). The amount of Ca in the dominant component of *N*. *ceranae* genotype 1 tested syrups was 10.5 mg/mL. This value was much lower than that (18.12 mg/mL) in the fluid but higher than that (5.75 mg/mL) in the corresponding air environment before their collection. The levels of Zn, Cu, Fe and Cl were lower than those in the concentrated fluid, and only the level of Ca was higher than that in the air environment. This is an important indication that the concentrated syrups collected contained sufficient nutrient elements to ensure *N*. *ceranae* proliferation and development. These results indicated that the overexposure with *N*. *ceranae* mainly caused by the lack of food in the environment of the campsites and not by differences in the level of nutrients in the syrups. The results suggested that *N*. *ceranae* genotype 2 was unable to maintain the balance of the nutritional content in the condensed syrups, and *N*. *ceranae* genotype 3 could not achieve this effect when *N*. *ceranae* genotype 2 was combined with an exogenous source of nutrition (S8 Table{ref-type="supplementary-material"}). *N*. *ceranae* genotype 2 and 3 survival after the fall phenotype {#sec029}

Benign prostatic hyperplasia (BPH) is a condition in which the typical hyperplastic characteristics of the prostate are combined with adenomatous hyperplasia of the prostate and associated obstruction of the lower urinary tract (LUT). The most consistent and reproducible symptoms are associated with problems of bladder outlet obstruction. Other symptoms include frequency and nocturia and frequency and urgency. BPH is a rather common urologic problem, but its global prevalence varies between the countries. The pathophysiology of the disease is not fully understood, but the proliferation, inflammatory infiltration, and stromal remodeling of the prostate is thought to be crucial steps in the formation of nodular prostatic hyperplasia. Medication for BPH is aimed at modifying the natural course of the disease with potential to prevent morbidity and mortality associated with BPH. This review presents the rational behind the current concept of treatment for BPH with a discussion on the mechanisms of action of different drugs used for BPH, clinical outcomes of the respective therapies, and their adverse effects
