No account yet?.The N.J. high school student who started a petition on Change.org to get Donald Trump impeached, has been involved with several other liberal causes for years. She started her first "Superhero Justice League" movement in her fifth-grade classroom two years ago, and now she's urging fellow students to sign a petition to get President Trump impeached. The Change.org petition called the 17-year-old student "a devoted feminist who believes women should have control over their bodies." But like the petition itself, her activism is largely focused on other liberal causes. N.J. teen named 'Superhero Justice League' founder 'Justice' Rebecca Acevedo said her high school years started out like any other -- girl in a uniform, high schoolers gossiping, a bully. But then she formed a movement called the "Superhero Justice League" to fight for girls' rights. "I wanted to become a superhero because I didn't feel like anybody really wanted to fight for girls like me in high school," Acevedo said. "I wanted to be somebody else." She was then called a bully. "At first I was confused because I didn't understand what was going on, but I soon figured it out. All the girls were looking at me because I had 'superpowers,'" Acevedo said. While her classmates were looking at her, she was looking back. "The more I got to know other people who felt bullied or disrespected, it was really obvious that I wasn't the only one," she said. Acevedo said she was struck by the lack of support for victims of bullying and other "superheroes" like the girl who stood up to her bully. "She was a superhero because she stood up for herself,"
